Educational outreach and other educational activities

Quant Camp (Notre Dame)

August 2017- present

I collaborate with three other Notre Dame faculty to teach a computational skills “boot camp”, which provides early-stage Biology graduate students with an introduction to computational tools. We bring 15 students to Notre Dame’s environmental research station at UNDERC for 5 intensive days of data collection, analysis skills, modeling, and reading peer-reviewed papers. I lead the module that introduces students to R statistical software.

Baboon Films: A project in scientific communication (Notre Dame and Penn High School, Mishawaka, IN)

Spring 2011-2019

I direct an educational outreach project with two teachers at Penn High School in Mishawaka, IN, Kevin McNulty and Shellie Harshberger. High school freshman gain hands-on experience with real, international research by making films about the Amboseli Baboon Project, the baboons, and the Amboseli ecosystem. In addition, each year the class visits my lab at Notre Dame for a day-long series of outreach activities, including “Savannah CSI” (a genetics game set in Amboseli) and a lab activity to learn about parasites. My undergraduate and PhD students conduct a panel discussion about career opportunities in science. This project began with my CAREER award in 2011 and has continued beyond the life of the award.

Public website for the Amboseli Baboon Research Project (Notre Dame)

2012-present

I built and maintain the public website for the Amboseli Baboon Research Project (ABRP), a long-term study of wild baboons in Kenya, which I help direct. This website provides a publicly accessible space for ABRP to share scientific results, news, information about baboons, and resources with the scientific community. It can be found at: <http://amboselibaboons.nd.edu/>

Visiting Instructor, Non-invasive Genetic Techniques in Wildlife Conservation (Smithsonian Conservation Biology Institute in Front Royal, Virginia)

May 2011, 2012

I served as a visiting instructor for this summer course, which involved designing and teaching modules to 30 graduate students from my own research.

Public science outreach (Smithsonian National Zoological Park, Washington, DC)

2005 - 2007

I designed and taught several outreach activities at the National Zoo, aimed at educating children and adults about conservation, genetics, and animal behavior.
