

(Political) Center:

In political terminology, the term “center” refers to the middle of the left-right, liberal-conservative spectrum. In American politics, centrist politics is usually considered moderate or a balance between the commonly understood leanings of the Democrat-Republican two-party system. The Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland both have multi-party systems with combinations of center-right and center-left leaning parties.